

Pre-providential History

Combination of cosmic with prehistory

Nick Bikkal 2021-12-10

Cosmic history is extremely old. God's children also have a long history of existence, although not all children are humans nor of this world; its doubtful if any of God's children reached a level of perfected heart; it's questionable if indeed anyone did.

The simple reason is the evidence of aggression and non-harmony among all God's children, including strife witnessed here on earth. Evidence is also mounting that, at least within our solar system, there are signs of past destruction attributable to beings of higher intellect who might have tried destroying each other using nuclear weapons.

Working on this assumption then, as much as there have been beings working on self interests, there must have also been those who worked on doing good, following their conscience and revelations. This would be natural since the Principle states we are all made with an original mind, no matter how fallen or evil we are. The more we advance with our Original Mind, the more our fallen mind attacks.

Earth, the chosen land

In the early twentieth century, who would have thought God would send His only begotten son and daughter to a poor, unknown corner of earth known as Korea? On the cosmic scale, earth fits the same small, remote, unassuming planet in a remote corner of a remote galaxy we call the Milky Way.

Heavenly Parent selected this globe to advance His providence of restoration, not only among humans, but also as the base for the cosmic restoration of all His children, none of whom has reached perfection, and all of whom must have had revelations of a messianic figure, regardless of how they imagined him / them to be. The same revelations given to humans on earth, Heavenly Parent would have given to all His children, in all remote corners of the universe, guiding them to higher spiritual levels, and ultimately to True Parents.

Core to the many activities involved in cosmic restoration is the bringing together of cosmic beings of all backgrounds, just as True Parents have brought together children of different races on earth. Our so-called junk genes, which make up a large portion of our genetic makeup, could very well have the purpose of bringing together Our cosmic siblings.

Providential history goes back a mere 6,000 years to our biblical human origins, Adam & Eve, but are they merely Heavenly Parent's first children, or did they have a far deeper providential purpose?

Original True Parents

I believe the biblical Adam & Eve were to be the True Parents of humans as well as all cosmic beings, just as are our True Parents we have been living with here on earth; Adam's and Eve's fall frustrated Heavenly Parent's plan to establish True Parents.

We do not know what happened to God's children in remote history that resulted in their distancing themselves from His Heart. What seems evident is that their cosmic wars continued even on this earth, going by the nuclear-caused vitrification remains in places such as the Indus Valley and Sinai desert, and possibly more areas. This is evidence the heart of embracing and harmonizing were not in their plans. This is not the heart of beings seeking to bring heaven to Heavenly Parent's children.

Returning resurrection

As True Parents were establishing themselves, good spirit world has been looking to support them in the creation of Cheon Il Guk, getting merit as they tried in the days they themselves walked the earth, or their planets, in attempts to bring about a better environment, preparing for the True Parents. This process is called returning resurrection.

Spirit world is coming down, looking to share in the fruits of the work they were entrusted with when they lived in their physical body, even many thousands of years ago. They seem to be saying they have something to tell us, to give us; something they achieved through their blood, sweat & tears, as they paid indemnity.

True Parents speak about providential history. This is the acknowledged biblical history. Yet, due to the symbolic nature of the Bible, Torah, Koran and other texts, dates and locations remain elusive.

If we scientifically study archaeology and other soft sciences we find that what had been traditionally taught is not based on science or facts, but on hunches and cultural biases. For example, how can we believe the pyramids of Giza were built only 4,500 years ago when the ancients didn't have all the architectural, mathematical, astronomical and other scientific knowledge required to make them? Could tools existing in those days really have been enough to mine and move many-ton stones, including making tight tunnels in dark enclosures? Incredibly finished stone work remains standing or littering ancient sites; evidence of high tech finish is evidence beings existed with high tech skills.

Our education never gave credit nor credence to the possibility of a past high civilization, all the evidence staring them in the eyes notwithstanding. It's the fruits of cultural bias that we're living with today. Paintings made on walls inside the pyramids required light to create. There was no electricity then, but neither are there signs of smoke in the buildings. For sure the originators of these theories had nothing but their preconceived notions to go by; they gave real science no thought.

The Internet at the end of the 20th century was a cruel discovery for the unscientific archaeological world. With it, amateur archaeologists came in, and with a minimum of archaeological studies but with scientific backgrounds overturned hundreds of years of old theories.

The story that's blossoming

Spirit world is coming down as returning resurrection. In 1983 True Parents asked that we have spiritual members in each center; witnessing, they said, cannot be done without their assistance. They can move the spirit world. Spirit world, our ancestors both recent and from the remote past, are very keen to come down and offer their life achievements, knowledge and wisdom they first offered to Heavenly Parents, to us. We need to become channels for them to share with us the fruits of the indemnity that they paid long ago; a course which they walked with the same heart we are walking today. Some did it in an era long forgotten; yet they count as our ancestors, if not physical then at least cultural.

Preparing for the Messiah

There was deep longing for salvation, back long ago. Heaven prepared the ancients in no different way that Heaven prepared the Israelites or the Christians. History does repeat itself until God's Will is achieved.

In almost all ancient cultures that archeologists know of, we see a preparation for the arrival for someone, a messianic figure by whatever name he went by. God was preparing all his children for this arrival, be it in the central providence or peripheral.

Pure and evolved hearts

A point of interest that caught my curiosity some time back was the fact that in the Holy texts we find implied evidence of understanding of God's people having fallen away from him, and the results, written symbolically. They seemed to know or understand the implications of the perceived fallen acts, as well as the meaning of providential figures' rolls; and without detailing the actions, they explained some restoration. Was this something that happened long ago in history, but told as more current event?

The Old Testament is full of symbolism which only True Parents have been able to decode. Who was able to more or less correctly encode what True Parents decoded? Saints and sages of yesteryear knew enough about the fall and restoration to the point that they were able to symbolically encode it. It was later included in the Bible and other holy texts.

The key lays in understanding Heavenly Father's Heart. Our world to date didn't have enough heart understanding of God as a parent to decode the Bible; when and where did this heart exist to do the original encoding?

Much development came at the time leading up to the coming of True Parents and during their time on earth, so I also believe that at a time long ago there was at least one period of build up to an advent. People back then were being prepared with similar insights, revelations, etc. Graphic depictions show how human development was not linear but took place in relative short bursts. These were also providential times.
