Thanks to your generous support of the Arabic Literacy Project, WFWP Jordan can continue not only teaching literacy to refugee children, but also provide moral support and character education. Mrs. Irikura, the Project Director, said, "It is very important for all children to have good experiences in order to build positive character."

During the summer, the children have been working with their teachers to create skits with a positive message, which they performed at three different refugee camps. Many had an amazing experience because they had never done such a thing before. Thank you for helping these children gain confidence and learn through positive interactions.

Enjoy these testimonies from a few students who participated:

Khaled, 12 years old, attends school but also works to collect cans, sell iron scraps, and sell small items at traffic lights in order to help his family. After the skits, he said he learned that we should be good people, stop fighting, and help our neighbors.

Jaber, 14 years old, has never attended school since he was young. He collects cardboard with his father. He occasionally comes to the WFWP literacy classes. But after participating in the skits, he said he wanted to study hard in order to become an engineer so he won't have to collect cardboard to support his family. He made a determination to start attending literacy classes.
