

The Art Of Serving - We never know how a simple testimony can affect someone

A few days ago, I received the reflection below because of a short testimony I gave at Morning Devotion.

Thank you for your testimony this morning. I cried sooo much because of it.

I responded to this person with the following:

That is why we should not be shy to share because we never know how a simple testimony can affect someone.

Because I have shared several times in recent weeks, yesterday thoughts came to my mind about "The art of serving". I came up with 3 things:

1. Serving: doing something for someone else - that is the easiest for anyone with a good heart and good conscience.
2. Ability to ask for help, that is often more difficult to do, especially for people who have a good heart and conscience.
3. Finding people who need help, so they can be helped. This require an additional effort of thinking and acting.

Any comments anyone?
