Unificationists in Los Angeles have been busy with outreach activities this month. In just the last week, participants have had success in bringing new people to Divine Principle studies, hosted a Divine Principle seminar, and given Principle of Creation introductions to several guests.

As part of the Los Angeles outreach initiative, local Unificationists as well as some traveling from other states to assist have been going out every day into the city, focusing especially on Cypress College.

Local Unificationists Ricky Joswick and Don Makowki helped to organize and host the Divine Principle seminar recently to accommodate three students from Cypress College who attended to hear Divine Principle lectures.

Many of the outreach participants from other areas were impressed with the organized outreach system that Los Angeles has developed. Everyone agreed that the experience adds value to their own life and faith. Takako Kawamura from Seattle, Washington shared, "What I got most was to be reborn myself, and then I can give life to other people."
