

George's Espinosa's Walking with True Father's Spirit on Trail of Tears Barrytown

Jorge Cuello Espinosa

April 14, 2014

I want to share a memory I had with Rev. Sun Myung Moon, my true father.

I was once in a leadership program in the summer of 2012, here in New York. We visited Barrytown for a few days and there was a time where I walked outside by myself in order to cross the Trail of Tears.

Before even going there, that time spent in Barrytown I had seen True Father in spirit, wearing his brown suit. I saw him behind me walking around the grass, building the famous net that many church members spoke about.

It was with that same brown suit that I felt close to True Father when we walked the trail of tears. I had never walked it before, but I remember asking True Father so many questions about love and beauty. I asked him "True Father why do people worry so much about external looks? True Father, why can't beauty just be original like God wanted in the Garden?"

And we walked and talked. We touched the branches of the tree. I took one and passed it to him, and he was there in spirit completely. It was a nice walk with True Father and I will never forget him.

Sincerely,

Jorge, your true son
