On Friday evening, November 2, the Peace Embassy in South London was the venue for a friendly gathering and witnessing opportunity initiated by Yuriko Roselli that welcomed Nepalese govt. minister Hon. Ek Nath Dhakal, his Philippino wife, Blessie, and another Nepalese Blessed Unification member, Santosh Paudel, together with 3 other members of the Nepalese govt. delegation. Their govt. had sponsored them to attend a conference on “Cooperatives 2012” in Manchester, where the idea of cooperatives originated from. Earlier in the week, Hon. Dhakal, who is also national leader of the U.M. in Nepal, spoke at a UPF organized event at the Houses of Parliament as Minister for Poverty Alleviation and Cooperatives.

With food contributions from various members and guests, Yuriko prepared the yellow room for a lovely dinner and Nepalese tea, followed by a short introduction to the UM mission in Nepal and True Parents, given by Ginger Nicholls. There were three new Nepalese guests who enjoyed the evening and were interested to study more. The evening finished with a magic show from Simon Roselli.

For anyone interested, Masako Brown has a CD series of the DP in Nepali language (with Hindu and Buddhist quotes) that was made from the televised lectures Ek Nath Dhakal gave in Nepal and also includes an introduction to Headwing Ideology. According to the Nepalese ambassador, there are about 100,000 Nepalese families living in Great Britain.
