Balmoral Castle, Scotland

We wanted to invite the Queen [Elizabeth II] for our concert (at that time True father was still in Britain), so we use a stratagem (After making lot of night prayer conditions.)

We knew that the queen was driving from a small chapel to her castle on Sunday morning, so we waited for her. As her Rolls Royce came slowly, all at once we went on the road playing music. The car at to slow down (but never to stop). We prepared an invitation letter like those old parchment ones.

Andy Kessler went to the window of the car, bow and presented the invitation. The queen pulled down her window and took it.

You imagine the scandal when newspapers found out it was "the Moonies" ...

Someone told us that we had done this in England we would have go to jail, but it was in Scotland ... I had many documents about it in an album but it got lost between our too many relocations. Louise Dickson was there too. May be she remember well other details ..
